BOOKS AND BOOKMEN

A Magnificent Book.

"The Silent Places" is a new book by Stewart Edward White, who, in this, has evidently "found himself" as a writer. It would be hard to say any-thing derogatory of the book from any point of view. It could not have been better done. The story is very simple, dealing mere-with the pursuit of a thieving Indian by two hunters in the employ of the Hudson Bay Company. Galen Albret Owners of Pet Canines Wonder Where and his daughter, whom readers of "Conjuror's House" will remember, figure slightly in this, but the action conand his daughter, whom readers of 'Conjuror's House' will remember, figure slightly in this. but the action concerns chainly only three characters—Sam Bolton, the old hunter; Dick Herron, the boyish coureur-des-bris, and May-may-gwan, the indian girl. The beginning and the end are at Conjuror's House, but the most of the story deals with "The Silent Places."

be no more elaborate than hieroglyphics ought to be.

The way in which, according to this authority, Adam described the scene atter the cating of the apple is picturesque but not in the least Biblical. It is as follows:

"I have had a variegated time. I estimated to a shadow, and in his prayer he dwelt at length on this simile. Shorty for a wonder had been listening. As they arose, he broke out:

"Pa!"

"Well?"

Comparisons with the author's former books, and works by other authors on the same subject, is inevitable in the case of a writer of so marked an inwith "The Silent Places." dividuality as Mr. White. This book riding through a flowery plain where differs from that charming love story, thousands of animals were grazing, "Conjuror's House," in being indefin-ably deeper and greater, and more se-rious. In the story of the love of Graeme Stewart the wilderness was a Graeme Stewart the wilderness was a setting for a human romance; here we have the romance, the heart-history of the very wilderness itself. Joseph Conrad got hold of the wordless spell of untamed tropical jungle and suggested it in his "Heart of Darkness," in some such fashlon as Mr. White here suggests the spell of the North. As for his "Blazed Trail," there is no comparison "Blazed Trail," there is no comparison that fruit, and death was come into the world. The there are my horse, paying no attention when I ordered them to desist, and they would even have eaten me if I had stayed—which I didn't, but went away in much haste." (New York: Harper & Bros.)

Jack London for parallels to this chron-icle of the frost, but fine as the work of London is but he has not staked out Chapter of Tuesian History," by Fred-Jected to dogs being around, but he did not suspect anyone particularly of having administered the poison.

Major Sylvester has instructed Lieutenant Shilling that "this is not a matter to be treated lightly, but should receive the earnest attention of Lieutenant Shilling and his command."

If the person who poisoned the dogs is found, what is to be done with him? Major Sylvester has said, as reported in the Sunday Times, that a person is not liable to prosecution in the Police Court for dog poisoning.

Differs With Major.

With this view Assistant Corporation Counsel A. Leftwich Sinclair differed, holding that an act of Congress has deholding that an act of Congress has de-clared that dogs bearing the tax-tag net by an Indian artist. It is a book clared that dogs bearing the tax-tag are personal property, are personal property before "all" the courts in the District. If that be so, he said, then the killers or destroyers of dogs are liable to a fine of $50 ln the Police Court on the charge of destroying personal property.

The owners of the dogs at the Albemarie are greatly excited over the war of extermination waged against their pets, it is understood, and desire that the police apprehend the offender at all costs. It would seem that the police are determined to do this, with the ultimate design of bringing the poisoner leftore the Police Court.

Because, if such is not their purpose, why should they prosecute the search for the offender? Unless the poisoner is subject to prosecution before the Police Court, what right have the police to arrest him?

Health and the dogs bearing the tax-tag which nobody who knows what good work is can afford to miss reading.

He would be possible to quote from any chapter half a dozen passages illustrating the author's descriptive powers and knowledge of his subject, but they would give about as much of an idea of the whole as a fwig of pine gives of the stately beauty of the tree. It is not a book to be sampled, but read.

Phillip R. Goodwin, already known as one of the illustrators of "The Call of the Wild," has decorated the book with six or seven pictures, very good, and each in the right place. (New York:

"The Inventions of the Idiot" is the latest perpetration of John Kendrick Bangs, and it just illustrates the amount of foolishness people will stand when it gests the spell of the North. As for his "Blazed Trail," there is no comparison between the two books. This is the finished work; that was a promise.

One naturally turns to the work of Jack Londom for parallels to this chronicle of the frost; but fine as the work.

The "Century."

The May "Century" contains many good things, beginning with a sketch of the house of commons by Henry Norman. Particularly interesting illustrated articles are two on the daguerreotype, by Pauline King and Abraham Bogardus, with pictures which are charming. Another notable picture is "Tolstoy at Twenty-nine," a portrait drawn from a photograph by George T. Tobin. A more exquisite little story than "Little Dog" by Gouverneur Morris, the "Century" has rarely secured. Other stories in this number are "A Mission in Maccidonia," by Stephen Bonsal, and "The Autobiography of Aureola," by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. man, Particularly interesting illustrated

The leading article in the May num ber of "Scribner's Magazine" is "The Yellowstone National Park," by Arnold Hague. A new novel, "The Soldier of the Valley," by Nelson Lloyd, begins in this number. "The Eagles of the Harbor" is an excellent descriptive article by Albert Bigelow Paine. Other features are "A Gloucester Skipper's Song," a poem by James B. Connolly, "Varick's Lady o' Dreams," by Elizabeth Jordan; "For the Faith," by H. G. Dwight, and "The Spirit of the Pines," by Frances R. Sterrett. Yellowstone National Park," by Arnold

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND - OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company-California Fig Syrup Co.-printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name-" Syrup of Figs"-or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company-California Fig Syrup Co.-printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company-California Fig Syrup Co .- printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.
